Golden Gate National Recreation Area

Park Description

Golden Gate National Recreation Area (GGNRA), a unit of the National Park Service, was established by an Act of Congress on October 27, 1972. The 80,000-acre park encompasses a great diversity of cultural and natural resources in and around the Bay Area of San Francisco, California. It includes Muir Woods National Monument and Fort Point National Historic Site.

The park holds almost five million three-dimensional and documentary artifacts dating from the time before European contact to the present. They are preserved and maintained for the public by the Division of Cultural Resources and Museum Management, which includes the Park Archives and Records Center (PARC).

Park Archives and Records Center

Historical Note

GGNRA and the sites within it have been collecting records since their inception. The PARC was established in 1994 to receive records and archival collections from the U.S. Army and the Presidio Army Museum after the closure of the Presidio of San Francisco as an Army base. The collections continue to grow through the donation of materials by private individuals, transfer of inactive park records by staff, and acquisition of relevant documentary materials.

Scope of Collections

The archival collections in the custody of the GGNRA document the history and activity of the various sites and groups associated with the park, described in the park's Scope of Collection Statement (2009).

The PARC contains U.S. Army and National Park Service facility records for the Presidio of San Francisco, forts and coast defense sites in the area, and various GGNRA sites. Subjects and sites documented include the United States Army (Bear Flag Revolt, Civil War, Spanish-American War, Mexican War, World War I, Army Air Service, Coast Artillery, Army medical facilities and issues, World War II, Army support during natural disasters, Viet Nam War, and Operation Desert Storm); Alcatraz Island (Army fortress, Army Disciplinary Barracks, U.S. Penitentiary, and Indian Occupation); the natural resources conservation movement resulting in the establishment of Muir Woods National Monument; agriculture in the Marin Headlands; Point Reyes Peninsula and Bolinas Lagoon areas; U.S. Lifesaving/Coast Guard Services; San Francisco Earthquake and Fire of 1906; Panama Pacific International Exposition of 1915; natural resources and environmental issues; and preservation of open space in the Bay Area. Also included in the PARC are many of the GGNRA administrative records that document the development and expansion of this park.

Visiting the PARC for Research

The PARC is located in an historic brick building, formerly a cavalry stable, on the Presidio of San Francisco. Collections and archives support services are available for walk-in research during open hours or by appointment. Please contact the PARC (see below) for the current schedule of reference hours.

Copy Services

Black and white photocopy services for standard and oversize materials are available on-site. Color photocopying, photographic duplication, and duplication of other media are available by special arrangement. Researchers are charged for all duplicates on a cost-recovery basis.

Rights and Publications

Copies are provided under the Fair Use provisions of the Copyright Law (Title 17, U.S.C.). Researchers must complete a Permission to Publish Contract form with the Park Archivist for any other intended use of these materials (such as publication or exhibit). Researchers should consult with staff regarding their needs for commercial or public use of materials.

Legal Status of Holdings

Many holdings of the PARC were acquired/transferred prior to the establishment of the archives program, and have little documentation on their provenance (source/chain of custody). All materials received after 1994 have been accessioned and documented. If provenance cannot be determined, the PARC assumes that it owns the property rights, but does not own the copyright.

Staff will provide assistance, but it is the responsibility of the researcher to acquire permission from the copyright holder to cite, quote, or reproduce collection materials.

Collections developed by or for government organizations or operations are in the public domain and may be used, cited, and quoted without restriction, provided they are properly credited to the PARC. The archives contain no national security classified materials.

Donations to the Collections

The PARC welcomes donations of a variety of historic materials that meet the criteria in the Scope of Collections Statement and do not duplicate existing holdings. Collections are maintained for research use in perpetuity; there is no guarantee that items will be exhibited. If you own materials that may be relevant to the themes of GGNRA and would like to deposit them in the PARC, please consult with an archivist.

How to Use This Finding Aid

This document contains information on the contents and significance of an archival collection. It includes descriptive information; repository information; collection history; biographical or historical information on creators of the collection; and a container or folder list of everything in the collection. After reviewing the finding aid, please discuss your specific needs with the archivist who will locate and retrieve the relevant materials.

How to Use the Collections

Please follow all rules and regulations regarding research, the use of the research facility, and the handling of collection materials. This will protect the collections so they continue to be available for generations to come. If anything appears to be out of order or damaged, please notify a staff member.

Creator

Donald DeNevi was born in Stockton, California, where his father ran a hardware store. Seeing the Stanley Kramer film "My Six Convicts" at the age of 14 incited a life-long fascination with the psychology of imprisonment and the viability of rehabilitation. In the late 1950s, he interned as a teacher at a prison near Stockton before graduating from San Francisco State University with a B.A. in History. He continued his education at U.C. Berkeley, from which he received his Ph. D in the early 1970s, and has since taught classes such as Criminal Profiling, Organized Crime in America, Classic Crime Cinema and Understanding the Criminal Mind at multiple colleges throughout the Bay Area. The author of 36 books to date, DeNevi was named Director of Recreation at San Quentin Prison in 2001, where he established a tennis program for lifers and three-strikers with prolonged sentences.

Golden Gate NRA, Park Archives, Don DeNevi Research and Manuscript Collection, GOGA 17975.

Provenance

The collection came to the Golden Gate National Recreation Area (GGNRA) over the course of multiple donations from Don DeNevi. Materials related to the U.S. Penitentiary, Alcatraz were donated directly to the GGNRA on three separate occasions in 1980—24 September, 26 October, and 22 December—and once in 1982, on 5 February. Additional materials on Alcatraz—as well as those which pertain to early aviation, California history and World War II—were donated to the Presidio Army Museum (PAM) over the course of four years, from 1980 through 1984; these materials were then acquired by the GGNRA in 1994 when the Presidio of San Francisco was closed and transferred from the U.S. Army to the National Park Service.

Scope and Content Note

The Don DeNevi Research and Manuscript collection consists of materials compiled by Don DeNevi while researching potential articles and books relative to the U.S. Penitentiary, Alcatraz, aviation history and west coast culture throughout the late 19th- and early 20th-centuries, and World War II, particularly as it relates to California. Focused on the inmate experience on Alcatraz, DeNevi researched seminal events in the history of the prison, such as the 1946 Riot and the 1962 Escape, in addition to lesser known escape attempts. During this time he developed a working friendship with inmate and Riot participant Clarence Carnes, which led to multiple collaborations and a particular fascination with Carnes as a subject.

In addition to these materials, DeNevi amassed a diverse collection of periodical clippings and excerpts, as well as books, from the late 19th- and early 20th-centuries which mainly address World War I, but also document the history of and popular reaction to earlier conflicts such as the Spanish American War and the Russo-Japanese War. Also documented within these materials are 20th-century transformations in technologies from consumer products to aviation, as well as societal conceptions such as gender equality.

Finally, DeNevi gathered a wide array of press and corporate photographs, as well as various source materials which document all aspects of war work on the west coast from U.S. entry into World War II following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941 to the return of troops to the San Francisco Port of Embarkation following the end of the Korean War in 1953; subjects include civilian contributions, Red Cross ventures, coastal defenses and military maneuvers, troop transport, and industrial production, among others.

Organization and Arrangement

The collection is organized topically into three series: (I) Alcatraz, (II) Late 19th- and Early 20th Century, and (III) World War II and the Korean War. Series I is arranged topically four subseries': (A) General Reference, which is further arranged by format into Photographs, Source Materials, Clippings and Correspondence; (B) 1946 Riot, which is further arranged into Photographs, Slides, Source Materials and Manuscripts; (C) Clarence Carnes, which is further arranged into Central File Documents, 1974 Return to Alcatraz, and Manuscripts; and (D) 1962 Escape, which is further arranged into Photographs, Source Documents according to participant (i.e. Anglin, Morris, etc.), General Reference Materials, and Manuscripts. Series II is arranged into two subseries: (A) Clippings and Excerpts, which are further arranged alphabetically by publication and (B) Books, Booklets and Magazines, which are further arranged chronologically. Series III is arranged into four subseries': (A) Photographs, which are bifurcated into two further arrangements, chronologically as well as by source—Gabriel Moulin, Standard Oil, Association of American Railroads and The Boeing Company; (B) Source Documents, which are further arranged into Clippings and Articles, Advertisements, War Production Board Posters, and Kaiser Shipyard materials; (C) Research Notes and Bibliography; and (D) Books.

Significance

DeNevi's friendship with Clarence Carnes and his use of other first-hand sources, combined with his historical research and comprehensive photograph collection, allow him to paint an intimate portrait of life on Alcatraz—a keystone of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area. As Alcatraz is ever a source of curiosity, this body of work allows the Park Archives and Records Center (PARC) to humanize The Rock for researchers, who are then able to better understand and interpret its enduring legacy. In addition to period editorials which recount historical events, late 19th- and early 20th-century reference articles, advertisements, illustrations and other publications elucidate popular culture of the time and allow PARC to provide context for the events that affected the people who shaped lands held within the GGNRA. Furthermore, materials which pertain to early aviation bolster Crissy Field materials already held in the collections.

Finally, DeNevi's extensive collection of World War II and Korean War photographs, as well as newspaper and periodical clippings, document the impact of both wars on the Bay Area and California. As San Francisco and its population militarized, civilians and servicemen interacted with increased frequency and as such the story of the Presidio of San Francisco and its sub-posts is necessarily intertwined with that of the neighboring city. Thus, the Don DeNevi Research and Manuscript Collection allows researchers a comprehensive cultural, and often personal, perspective on events that shaped the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, beginning with the Spanish American War and ending with the end of the Korean War, while simultaneously documenting the process of one writer's approach to local historical nonfiction.

Series Description

In collecting materials for research, Don DeNevi amassed a collection which documents a broad swath of history specific to California, but also with national relevance and significance. DeNevi's lifelong fascination with prison culture drew him to one of the most infamous prisons in California that became one of its most treasured cultural landmarks, and is now a keystone in the Golden Gate National Recreation Area: U.S. Penitentiary, Alcatraz. While writing books on seminal events in the prison's history, such as the 1946 Riot and the 1962 Escape, DeNevi fostered relationships with guards, such as Philip Bergen, and inmates, such as Clarence Carnes, that allowed him access to previously unpublished viewpoints of often told tales. In particular, his friendship with Clarence Carnes encouraged the latter to write his own memoirs and undertake the biography of a prisoner he knew on The Rock, Ellsworth "Bumpy" Johnson, in addition to his collaborations on DeNevi projects. Through photographs, photocopied source documents from the Bureau of Prisons Central Files, correspondence, and manuscripts, life on Alcatraz comes into focus through first person narratives and the exhaustive research of an author particularly attuned to prison psychology.

Excerpts and clippings from late 19th- and early 20th-century publications used by DeNevi as reference materials for various projects provide insight into and context for a period of time which saw the expansion of the city of San Francisco and its military presence. These materials capture the pulse of popular culture in images, illustrations and editorials at a time when the United States was entering modernity at the end of the 19th-century as an international force following the Spanish American War; coping with an age pockmarked by warfare at the dawn of the 20th-century, beginning with the Philippine-American and the Russo-Japanese wars and leading into the conflict that consumed the globe—World War I; and celebrating the escalating prosperity of a post-war world in which Americans explored migrating social conditions, as H.G. Wells does in his article on gender equality, and the limits of the horizon, evidenced in the self-bound books of compiled articles on kites, airships, balloons, and airplanes.

Materials which pertain to World War II and the Korean War largely focus on home-front activities on the West Coast, particularly in California. Here DeNevi has compiled an expansive collection of press photographs which depict all aspects of war work, including private-sector industrial production and transportation; coastal defenses implemented by the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard; and civilian defense efforts aided by victory gardens, salvage campaigns, war bond and blood donation drives, and other auxiliary activities. Every demographic is represented, from teenagers harvesting crops to celebrities volunteering at local Canteens; from housewives collecting reusable Coke and milk bottles while their husbands train at the U.S. Navy school in Monterey or in U.S. Army maneuvers at Camp Hunter Liggett prior to embarkation overseas. Sailors and soldiers inundated San Francisco, gateway to the Pacific Theater, as seen in images captured by noted California photographer Gabriel Moulin, and Boeing converted the city of Seattle, Washington into a company town for the duration of the war—a transformation documented by Boeing in photographs collected by DeNevi and included in this collection. However, all was not harmonious in America and newspapers in California also documented labor strikes in the East Bay, race riots in Los Angeles and the enemy in our midst at a temporary Prisoner of War camp on Angel Island. These materials document the profound impact that war had on the West Coast civilian population, which could not help but be partially militarized due to its proximity to a major aggressor of the war, Japan, and crucial coastal defense outposts, as well as the main Port of Embarkation for troops sent to locations in the Pacific.

Description: Series I includes materials compiled by DeNevi while researching various articles and books, and include press photographs, photocopied histories and source documents, newspaper clippings, correspondence, and other research materials which pertain to Alcatraz, particularly the 1946 Riot, Clarence Carnes and the 1962 Escape. [See Appendix 1: Item List for a comprehensive inventory]

Subseries A: General Reference materials include photographs and photographic slides, which are arranged into six sub-subseries': Artists' Renderings, which include copies of historic landscapes as well as a proposal for development of the island in the 1960s; Aerial Views; Exterior Views; Interior Views; Prisoners not involved in the 1946 riot or 1962 escape, arranged alphabetically by last name; and Wardens. Also included are various source materials and clippings used for background research, as well as correspondence which document

Subseries B: 1946 Riot materials include general reference photographs and photographic slides, as well as those that depict the responsible inmates prior to the riot, events which happened while the aptly named Battle of Alcatraz raged on, and the investigation and trial after the remaining inmates were subdued. Additionally, the subseries includes source materials and clippings, and the manuscript for “Alcatraz ’46: The Anatomy of a Classic Prison Tragedy” with accompanying notes, appendices and promotional pamphlets.

Subseries C: Clarence Carnes materials build on Subseries B and include photocopied U.S. Bureau of Prison Central File documents on Carnes, from his initial incarceration in 1945 through his various paroles ending in 1979. Photographs and clippings document Carnes’ return to Alcatraz in 1974, after the island was turned over to the National Park Service, during which he inspected his old cell and surveyed the grounds. Also included are source documents for and drafts of manuscripts written by Carnes with encouragement from DeNevi—a biography on Ellsworth “Bumpy” Johnson, and his autobiography.

Subseries D: 1962 Escape materials include photographs, as well as photocopied U.S. Bureau of Prison Central File documents on Frank Lee Morris, which trace his entry into juvenile detention programs in 1940 through his escape in 1962. General reference clippings and diagrams outline escape specifics and were used in preparation for the manuscript “Four Against the Rock: An Incredible Escape from Alcatraz,” a draft of which is also included here. Also included is a 16mm print of the 1979 Clint Eastwood film “Escape From Alcatraz” in three reels.

Condition: Good

Description: Materials, such as photographs and source documents, were compiled by DeNevi while researching the following books on World War II: “United States Military Railway Service: America’s Soldier-Railroads in WWII,” “America’s Fighting Railroads: A World War II Pictorial History,” and “The West Coast Goes to War: 1941-1942.” [See Appendix 1: Item List for a comprehensive inventory.]

Subseries A: Photographs from diverse agencies such as Acme Newspictures, the Associated Press, the Oakland Tribune; the United States Army Signal Corps, Coast Guard, Marine Corps, and Navy; Gabriel Moulin; and corporate powerhouses Standard Oil, the American Association of Railroads, and The Boeing Company depict a variety of domestic scenes from the West Coast.

Subjects encompass home-front activities which contributed to the war effort, such as Red Cross blood drives, war bond and salvage campaigns, volunteer harvesting and victory gardens, civil air patrol and civilian defense activities, and rationing; coastal fortifications, and military preparations; troop training, transport (both by rail and by sea) and embarkation overseas; industrial output and shipbuilding, including a plethora of images which depict women at work and labor strikes; and patriotic events throughout the Bay Area, celebrating Armistice Day and honoring the fallen at the San Francisco National Cemetery. Also well documented is the lighter side of war time—servicemen enjoying their leave at local canteens, attending movies, and dancing with their girls—and celebrations which spilled into the streets of San Francisco at the announcement of the end of World War II.

Subseries B: Source materials such as original copies of the Civilian Exclusion Orders which forcibly removed and interred Americans of Japanese descent, as well as a proclamation that determined the amount of allowable light on the home front during wartime show the impact on civilian populations during the war. A photocopied War Production Board poster, issues of “Boeing News,” booklets and articles on Henry J. Kaiser and his Kaiser Steel Company, as well as articles on rail transport during the war and an excerpt from “The Pacific Northwest Goes to War” document domestic industrial production and transportation during the war; these are supplemented by advertisements for various domestic war production, such as Lockheed Martin, Standard Oil, Chevron, etc—some of which were designed by Walt Disney. In addition, numerous periodical clippings from publications such as cartoons from “The New Yorker” and “Sunset” magazines showcase the war in popular culture, as do advertisements for luxury goods (cigarettes, whiskey, etc.), home furnishings and food products. Finally, editions of the “7th AAF Brief” from 1944, and a bound collection of “Yank” from 1942 through 1945 offer the Army perspective on the war.
