

Spotted Sandpiper

(Actitis macularius)

- Spotted Sandpipers are easily recognizable by how they walk with a distinctive teeter and the bobbing of their tails
- Female Spotted Sandpipers create and protect the territory while male Spotted Sandpipers take care of the young
- These birds can be found along ponds, lakes, beaches, rivers, and along streambanks
- Size: Small
- Color: Dark brown back with a white belly that has dark brown spots on it.

